INTRODUCTION

In 1994 – just seven years ago – that World Wide Web, a little known Internet communication system based on hypertext principles, began to attract notice. Since then the web has experienced exponential growth. A recent forecast estimates that by 2005, the web will have 150 million uses worldwide. By any standard, the web is the fastest-growing communication system history has even witnessed.

As a year III semester I student we were asked to design a web site as a part about the degree of Bachelor of Art. Therefore as the topic for my web site I have selected “United Nations”, which gives more details about this International Organization.

I am interested in International Organizations specially in United Nations, so this was basically ^{the} reason to select United Nations as the topic of my web site. Also I think my web site may very ^{be} helpful for the people who are seeking more information about United Nations.

Here I used HTML (Hyper Text Markup Language) to create my web site. In addition I have used MS Front Page 2000, Macromedia Flash 5.0, Macromedia Dream viewer, MS Excel, MS Power Point and MS Word to design the web site.

By designing this web site I ^{was} able to have experience in the growing technologies for creating web sites.
